Hi guys, I'm a freshmen (Direct entry yr2) from NTU EEE. I want to change my current laptop into macbook because I just bought Ipad Pro and love the Apple OS. I want to wait for the new apple silicon Macbook but I'm not sure whether I can use it for my EEE course or not. I scared some of the applications require a Window OS.

But also lucky for NTU EEE i get to study for a degree. Even though EEE is a good degree with many opportunity, it is not easy, poly standard of engineering can be covered with few hours of lecture. Given a chance, i will never take electrical engineering for the sake of degree. Not worth the effort.

NTU or Southampton for EEE course? Hello, I am from Malaysia, I would like to ask if NTU or Southampton is better for EEE undergraduate course? Because I just got my UK A-levels results, and I think I have a really slim chance of getting into NTU right now, so my alternative now is going for Southampton(2+2 programme).

NTU EEE. Hi, I heard that it is really hard to score well in ntu Eee as compared to the other engineering courses. Is it true? My phy and math aren't that strong. So would it be even harder for me? Also please read about NTU's EEE about "One Degree, Many Opportunities" truly means holding an EEE degree. Means you might study EEE doesn't mean this really applies to your future, and you might branch off to other routes. Also please do know the difference between "EEE" and "CS/IT" program. And do some serious thinking why you want to do EEE.
