The influence of Hollywood is explored - something Glamourdaze has written about before. Another point Fiell and Dirix make is that the Depression brought about a market democratisation in women's clothing. The birth of cheap ready to wear copies of the high fashion elite during the early years of the 1930s is a trend continued to this day."

Men's Fashions. In the men's fashion field, 1949 saw the death of the exaggerated drape jacket, which hung loosely from the shoulders with hardly any indentation at the waist-line. "Drape" was a style which originated in England at the end of the 19th century and gave an illusion of broader shoulders and deeper chest.
